IT MAKES NO DRUNKARDS,

Breaks no Hearts, Excuses no Crimes.

Dr David Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY is not a disguised enemy of the human race; where it cannot help, it does not harm. FAVORITE REMEDY is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It does not heat nor inflame the blood, but cools and purifies it. In all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and the delicate derangements which afflict women, the action of FAVORITE REMEDY is beyond praise. Thousands of grateful people voluntarily testify to this, in letters to Dr. Kennedy; and with a warmth and fullness of words, which mere business documents and certificates never possess. It makes no drunkards—excuses no crimes—breaks no hearts. In its coming there is hope, and in its wings there is healing. We challenge a trial and are confident of the result. Dr. Kennedy would have it understood that while he is engaged in the introduction of his medicine, "Favorite Remedy," he still continues the practice of his profession, but confines himself exclusively to Office practice. He treats all diseases of a chronic character, and performs all the minor and capital operations of surgery.

CITY OF PORTLAND.

NOTICE is hereby given that the "Joint Standing Committee on Laying out New Streets," to whom was referred the petition of R. F. Skillings and others, praying that a street may be laid out at Peaks' Island, commencing at "Island Avenue," at a point near the old school house, thence easterly to the house of Cornelius Maxwell, will meet at the Mayor's office, in City Building, on SATURDAY, the 16th inst., at 7 o'clock P. M., to hear all parties interested, and then determine and adjudge if public convenience requires that said street should be so laid out, and if they should so adjudge will then and there lay out said street and fix the damages as required by law.

Also, on petition of John O. Mannix, that a part of Federal street from India to Hancock street be discontinued and relaid out according to plan submitted by the City Civil Engineer, said Committee will meet at the Mayor's office at the time aforementioned, to hear all parties interested and then determine and adjudge, if public convenience requires that said part of Federal street should be discontinued and relaid out, and if they should so adjudge, will then and there discontinue and relay out said Federal street, and fix the damage as required by law.

AN ARGUMENT THAT WEIGHS A TON.

Here is a Republican campaign document in a nutshell, that weighs a ton:

Under Republican administration during fifteen years of peace, $842,680,476 of the principal of the National debt has been paid, while the current annual interest is $70,000,000 less than at the close of the war. The Democratic press and stump speakers might as well try to tunnel through the Rocky Mountains with a hair-pin, as to break the force of this magnificent showing.

WHY THE SOUTH IS SOLID FOR HANCOCK.

Consider what Lee and Jackson would do were they alive. These are the same principles for which they fought for four years. Remember the men who poured forth their life blood on Virginia's soil, and do not abandon them now. Remember that upon your vote depends the success of the Democratic ticket.—WADE HAMPTON, AT THE MEETING IN THE INTEREST OF DEMOCRATIC HARMONY IN VIRGINIA, AT STAUNTON, JULY 25.

MEANING OF A DEMOCRATIC RESTORATION.

"We would like to engrave a prophecy on stone to be read of generations in the future. The negro in these States will be slave again or cease to be. His sole refuge from extinction will be in slavery to the white man.—MERIDIAN (MISS.) MERCURY.

SOLON CHASE ON FUSION.

The old Bourbons have visions of Hancock and glory—that is, a pull at the public teat, and they have agreed with a few trading Greenbackers to divide the custom houses and post-offices. That is the end and beginning of fusion in Maine. If that nest of eggs does hatch out, it will be a nondescript brood

I will tell you who I think the Republicans should nominate, and who I consider their strongest man; he is a true man, a man of principle, an honest man, and would make a good President, for us all. Personally, I consider him the best man you could nominate. I refer to Gen. James A. Garfield, of Ohio.—THOMAS A. HENDRICKS, DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR VICE PRESIDENT IN 1876

How Democrats Carry Elections.

If the Republicans do carry Indiana it will be in face of fearful odds. Every purchasable vote in the State has been purchased by the Democrats. But boughten votes will not make the election of Landers sure, and so other methods of fraud are freely resorted to. The Indiana registry laws are notorious for the advantages they give to false voting. They are indeed an invitation to repeaters—an invitation that the Democrats this year, as in years past, hasten to avail themselves of. The "fraud" party have usually been content with the services of Kentuckians, who have been brought over the river by thousands to overcome the legitimate Republican majority. In the present campaign even this great resource has proved inefficient, and it has been found necessary to send to Philadelphia and secure the services of Speaker Randall's expert serving-men. Last Sunday the notorious Bill McMullin left the Pennsylvanian metropolis at the head of a gang of roughs and soon after arrived in Indianapolis. The story of the trip is told in the following dispatch from Philadelphia to the Indianapolis Journal:

The desperate effort of the Democrats to carry Indiana is forcibly illustrated by the fact that the well known Bill McMullin of this city, the "Dear Bill" of Samuel J. Randall, has been called upon to lend his service. On Sunday he received a telegram from Speaker Randall, who is stumping in Indiana, to repair to that state. Hurriedly on that day two gangs of desperadoes, comprising fifty notorious ruffians of the fourth ward, were organized, and at five minutes to ten Sunday night they made their departure, headed by the well known Bob Smith, Lister, Joe Totum, Ed. Nugent, Bracken, Charley Burke, Nick Stafford. These men passed through Pittsburg yesterday, and were seen by a detective who is well acquainted with them. Tonight McMullin himself, with a squad of fourth ward workers, took the cars for your city. The men who go on this nefarious trip include some of the worst characters in this city. They include many of those who in the palmy days of the famous Moyamensing hose company were known as the "Killers." Their duties, as stated by them to friends before leaving, will be to repeat all they can on election day, and make up the balance of the time intimidating voters in the wards where they will do the best work, for not a darkey will dare to show himself on the street after witnessing the "killers'" mode of operation. Their plan in this city has been to move about the wards throughout the city, knocking negroes down and in some cases shooting them and refusing to allow them to vote at any poll. They will make it lively for the people of Indianopolis all the time until the election is over unless the most stringent methods are adopted concerning them before that time.

These are the methods resorted to by the party that professes to desire a full and free vote and honest count, and lustily declaims against fraud.

MR. S. S. JOHNSON, Manager of the Duchess (New York) Company Iron Works, who has heretofore acted with the Democratic party, has declared his intention to vote for Garfield and Arthur and to do all that he can to secure their election. Mr. Johnson is a sagacious, long-headed business man, and, having looked over the ground carefully, he decides that he can't afford to take the risk that would be involved in the election of Hancock.

THE Chicago Inter-Ocean reporters have discovered several emissaries of the Cobden Club in that city, who are engaged in distributing Mongredien's Address to the American Farmer. They are in active cooperation with the Democrats.

THE Arthur Club of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., having elected General Chester A. Arthur an honorary member, he has written a letter to its President in which he says: "I am glad to infer from the organization of your club and from its strength that now, as in my time, the Union curriculum encourages the germination of stalwart Republicanism; and I sincerely hope she may graduate no young Democrats, until, as Gen. Grant recently wrote me, 'we can have two national parties, every member of which can cast their ballots as their judgment dictates, without fear of molestation or ostracism, and have them honestly counted; parties not differing in opinion as to whether we are a nation, but as to policy to secure the greatest good to the greatest number of its citizens.'"

THE public debt statement for the month of September shows a decrease during that month of $8,974,891.68; in the three months since June 30, the decrease has been $26,578,112.68. Commenting on this favorable showing, the New York Tribune says: Every debt statement is an argument against a change of Administration. The Republican party has so adjusted the revenue laws that an enormous revenue flows into the Treasury each month, and the public debt is rapidly reduced, without exposing home industries to hurtful competition from abroad. Under no Democratic administration has it ever been found possible to raise a large revenue, even for a short time, without severe prostration of home industry. Yet the largest revenue ever raised by a Democratic administration, even at the cost of serious industrial disasters, was insignifiant compared with that which the Republican party secures, month after month and year after year, as a result of marvellous prosperity in all branches of industry and trade.

PURCHASE is at present the only mode by which the United States Treasury can get the bonds of 1881. As its surplus revenues permit it is buying them at the rate of $10,000,000 a month. December 31 the loan of February, 1861, becomes payable, and $13,606,000 now remains unpaid. This is the only sum within the reach of the treasury except by purchase before the first of July next. Then all of the fives and sixes become redeemable. The total volume, including the bonds of December, 1880, has fallen to $697,351,600. On the first of July about $600,000,000 will remain. The problem of further payment and refunding will depend greatly on the result of the presidential election.

SECRETARY EVARTS spoke the truth eloquently when he said in his recent speech: "The party that I have upheld to you for its great achievements may be stricken down by the American people for what it has done, and in the only incomplete service that remains to fulfill its pledges and consummate your honor, it is resolved that there shall be a free ballot, a full vote and a fair count in this land—all over it. If it is to be stricken down by the American people for that resolve, so be it. 'Such a party,' to borrow the phrase of Lord Bolingbroke, 'such a party may fall, but if it fall, truth, liberty and reason will fall with it.'"

REBEL flags are being displayed once more. The first appeared in the columns of the Hot Springs (Ark.) Telegraph on the occasion of the great Democratic barbecue of Garland county. At the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Democratic demonstration, September 28, a rebel flag was displayed in the procession. The same thing occurred the next day at Elwood, Ind., at a Democratic meeting, only there were two flags instead of one. A fifth rebel flag was displayed at a Democratic meeting at Circleville, Ohio, and a sixth flies constantly from a Democratic pole in Georgetown, D. C.

THE Boston Traveller puts it in this way: "If General Garfield becomes our next President there will be an extension of the period of prosperity for our manufacturers they are now enjoying. If Gen. Hancock is elected our manufacturers will suffer, much of the capital invested will be lost, and wages will be reduced. American capital and industry will be benefited by a Republican victory; a Democratic victory will give prosperity to English manufacturers and English operatives."

TAUNTON Gazette: Democratic asperity is softening. Since their conversion, "Beast Butler" has become General Butler, "Boss Shepherd," Mr. Shepherd, "Old Sickles," Gen. Sickles, and "that d——d Forney," Col. Forney, the far-sighted political prophet.

BOSTON Transcript: Hancock is to prepare a statement, but as it will not be telegraphed at the expense of the government the country has no particular interest in it.

ONE of the most active Democratic politicians in Ohio is Dr. J. B. Kincaid, who, in February, 1861, offered to organize a regiment for the service of the Confederacy.

Spoopendyke's Suspenders.

Another Unfortunate Episode in the Famous Brooklyn Family.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

"Now, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he stretched himself and drew on his pantaloons, "you've cleaned these trousers up first rate. This is what I call economy. It saves money. If I'd taken 'em to the tailor's it would have cost a couple of dollars at least, and you've saved just that amount," and Mr. Spoopendyke went to his ablutions and then pulled on his shirt.

"I'll clean your coat too, if you like," said Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Leave it at home some day and I'll take this spot out of the sleeve," and Mrs. Spoopendyke bustled around and looked delighted with the idea of pleasing her husband.

"Where's my suspenders?" asked Mr. Spoopendyke, screwing himself areund and looking down his back. "You didn't clean the suspenders clear out of sight, did you?"

"They were there when you put on your pants," said Mrs. Spoopendyke. I haven't touched them. What did you do with them?"

"Oh, yes, certainly. I did something with them! What d'ye 'spose I did with them? Think I set 'em up in business somewhere, don't ye? Got an idea I gave 'em a vacation to go fishing haven't ye? Well, I didn't, and more'n that, I didn't send them away to be educated for the ministry. Where's my suspenders? Where did you put 'em? 'Spose I'm going around holding those pants up all day? Think I got no business interests besides holding on my breeches with both hands? What 'id you do with the measly things?"

"I know I didn't take them off the pants," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, pulling open the bureau drawers and hustling things around in a vain endeavor to find the missing articles.

"May be I can fix your pants so you won't need any suspenders to-day, and I'll find them before night," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"That's it. You've got it," raved Mr. Spoopendyke. "How are you going to fix 'em? Going to tie 'em on with a shoestring like you do your bustle? Going to walk 'round behind me all day and hold 'em on? P'raps you can pull 'em up and button 'em around my neck; How d'ye propose to fix 'em? Going to put 'em on me upside down so if they fall they'll fall up? If I had your head I'd go out to service as a tile. Fix 'em up, why don't ye? Why don't ye fix 'em? These trousers are getting sick at the stomach waiting to be fixed!" and Mr. Spoopendyke shot across the room and dove under the wardrobe in search of the lost suspenders.

"They must be there somewhere," said Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"Show 'em to me then!" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, "take a stick and point 'em out to me! Of course they're there somewhere, only just put your thumb on 'em. What have ye done with 'em? Can't ye recollect whether ye made 'em up into hat bands for the heathen like you did my dressing gown, or whether you planted them to see if they would grow, like you did my straw hat? Think they walked off like a croton bug? S'pose those suspenders have taken their girl to a picnic? What kind of housekeeping d'ye call this, anyhow? Where's my suspenders?" howled Mr. Spoopendyke, poking around in the soiled clothes bag. "Where's those suspenders?" and he pulled the books off the shelf and rummaged around behind the case with a broom handle for a divining-rod.

"Just let me buckle them tight behind," said Mrs. Spoopendyke; "the strap will hold them."

"That's the scheme," shrieked Mr. Spoopendyke; "something's got to hold them! If I was as sharp as you I'd get rich hiring out for an oyster knife. All you want is to have somebody sit cross legged on you and come home two weeks after you're expected, to be a tailorshop! Going to find those dog-gasted suspenders between now and the next war?"

"I know they were on his pants when he put them on," mused Mrs. Spoopendyke, entering upon a little inductive reasoning. "He didn't take them off, and so they must be there now," and the good woman approached her husband with a smile.

"Oh! now they're going to be fixed," said Mr. Spoopendyke with a horrible grin. "P'raps you're going to cut button-holes in your hands and feet and hang over my shoulders, ain't ye? Want me to put 'em on over my head, like a measly shirt with two inches and a flounce to it, don't ye? Maybe you think those suspenders hurried down to breakfast, so's to get the first crack at the morning paper, don't you?"

But Mrs. Spoopendyke made no response. Opening the back of her husband's fluttering shirt, she saw the missing suspenders. He had slipped them over his shoulders before assuming the muslin, and had forgotten all about them.

"Smart as a whip, ain't ye?" growled Mr. Spoopendyke, as he drew off his shirt and let the suspenders down. "If my head was as clear as your's I'd hire out for a church bell. You only need four lenses and a drop of rain water to be a microscope." And Spoopendyke hurried on his clothes and scuttled down stairs to get the morning paper before his wife could make a clutch at it.

Planets in October.

[Providence Journal.]

Jupiter is evening star, in regular standing after the 7th, and will be in his best and brightest position for observation through the month of October, one of the most favorable seasons of the year for enjoying the glory of the star-spangled firmament. That much-dreaded epoch in his revolution, his perihelion, was safely passed on the 25th of September, and his vast bulk will sweep on in resistless course farther and farther from the sun for six years to come. Not till 1891 will he appear again in his present size and brilliancy. Therefore diligent heed should be paid to his superb appearance in the eastern sky, where, as soon as the sun has set and the short twilight fades, he reigns supreme among the twinkling mysteries that form his brilliant court. It is not flattering to human pride to reflect that one-third of the inhabitants of the earth will have passed away before our giant brother shall have made another revolution round the sun!

On the 7th, Jupiter is in opposition when he is at the nearest point to the earth, the earth being directly between him and the sun. Thus he is now about one hundred and eighty miles nearer the earth, and at the same time nearly forty-six million miles nearer the sun than when at his extreme distance from each. The combination of the two conditions makes him a glorious object of planetary study. Observers who have access to telescopes should improve the opportunity to behold him in his present superb aspect, with his moons, belts, and ruddy spot, and note the exquisite softness and delicacy of his celestial coloring. Those who cannot enjoy a telescopic view will find with a good opera glass a lovely picture of the planet and his moons, the disc of the planet being plainly visible, and the moons looking like minute points of gold in the azure blackness of the sky. Whether this great planet is pulling upon the sun with a disturbing force that is distinctly felt or not, it is certain that an unusual commotion exists in the great luminary. Elemental warfare is still going on. Snow four inches deep in a Western State, a prevalent malaria in regions where it has not before existed for many years, and unusual magnetic and electrical disturbances manifested in violent deflections of the magnetic needle, and brilliant auroral displays, are some of the recent forms in which the storm-agitated surface of the sun has found expression in terrestrial territory. Meteors of unusual size, duration, and dazzling brilliancy are also to be ranked with the phenomena of the season. The face of the sun is still darkened with spots of great numbers and immense proportions, and tongues of flame are playing over his fiery surface as is usual at this maximum of the sun-spot cycle The epoch of auroral light and magnetic storm has evidently commenced, and brilliant shows of Northern lights may now be looked for. Meantime storm has alternated with sunshine, bounteous harvests have rewarded the husbandman, and the perfection of Autumnal weather has crowned the season in our temperate clime, while this zone of the earth, except in the recurrence of waves of heat and waves of cold, has little reason thus far to complain of Jupiter's perihelion or the great spot-cycle. It seems a stretch of imagination to think of our sun as a small yellow star twinkling in the heaven with a variable light to gazers from the remote region of space. Such is doubtless its appearance, while the planets, including great Jupiter, can no more be seen than we can see dark planets circling round the stars in our nocturnal sky.

Saturn will be evening star according to astronomical records after the 18th. He then comes into opposition, and like Jupiter is at his nearest point to the earth. The reason he is not as conspicuous is that he is not as large and is twice as far away. He is, however, in unusually favorable circumstances for observation. Besides his being at the nearest point, he is travelling toward perihelion, his rings are opening to their widest extent, and he is in Northern declination. If Jupiter was out of the way he would command more attention. He far surpasses him in telescopic view, and nothing can be imagined more magnificent than a sight of this planet, as he now lies cradled in his rings. An opera glass will show an elongation in Saturn's disc, caused by the rings. The two planets are moving south, but as Jupiter moves faster, they will be slightly further apart at the end of the month than they are now, Saturn being still northwest of Jupiter, and rising a little more than half an hour later.

Venus is evening star, and is now far enough away from the sun to be distinctly visible after the sunset, shining in the twilight glow with a serene loveliness that gives promise of what may be expected when she reigns supreme in the West in the Winter months while the evanescent splendors of Jupiter and Saturn slowly fade. She must be looked for about eight degrees south of the point where the sun set.

Thus the October nights will afford a grand opportunity to study the stars. The oppositions of Jupiter and Saturn show two prominent planets under peculiarly favorable conditions for observation, as well as in their brightest phase. Astronomers will not be idle in taking notes, and it may be that the world will be electrified by some brilliant discovery like that of the moons of Mars in the opposition of 1877. According to mathematical gradation there should be more moons to be discovered in Saturn's retinue, for if the earth has one, Mars two, and Jupiter four, Saturn should have sixteen. A few more moons for Saturn or an additional ring, or a fresh spot on Jupiter, giving a peep of his interior beneath his twenty thousand mile-deep blanket of clouds, would nobly immortalize the eventful year 1880.

Conventionalities.

The conventional Irishman, sailor, rustic, whether virtuous or comic, ruffian, wicked Baronet, (the wicked Earl is less fashionable now,) all these and a host of others are known, and have their appropriate gestures, and even their appropriate voices, according to conventional propriety. Who ever expects the irascible but good-hearted uncle, who raps his stick on the stage, and feigns indignation at the extravagance of the young dog his nephew, while he is really proud of him, to speak in the same tone as the virtuous peasant, or wicked Baronet? Any actor who dared to do so, although there is no reason in life why he should not, would be considered a failure—he would be flying in the face of conventional authority. The finest examples of what this unwritten tradition demands are, perhaps, to be seen when a small provincial company plays one of Sheridan's comedies; say, as a very good example, "The Rivals." It is worth while to see this, if only to note how evidently all the characters are acting to some pattern, and how utterly regardless they are as to the resemblance they may or may not bear to real life. At the same time it is evident that if there were not some standard easily reached, and which both actor and audience agreed should be accepted as equivalent to nature, the average talent of the performers must be suddenly increased, for it would then take a very clever man to fill a fifth-rate part. There is more conventional fun got out of things that are not exactly funny, in literature, than even on the stage. The misuse of the letter "H," or its omission, will of course suggest itself to everyone, and it must be a dull article, indeed, in which the calling one of the characters 'Arry, and making him declare he is 'appy, does not carry the reader away into a most boisterous merriment; although he may have seen the same thing with scarcely a variation, 500 times before. But even this is not a surer card to play than is to spell in full the usual prefix to a name, and write "Mister." To make the vulgar character of a book address another as Mister, or to speak of him as Mister Jawkins, at once indicates that he is vulgar, and gives the cue to the reader, who knows directly that he is to laugh—although how the most refined scholar who ever left Cambridge or Oxford would pronounce the word so as to show his refinement, I do not pretend to know. One of the regular conventional pieces of humor died out about two generations back—they do die sometimes, these conventionalities, although we cannot kill them. It appears to have then been quite enough to bring in the cit, the worthy cit, especially if described as a dry-salter by trade, and still better if he were a Common Councilman, to put the reader in good temper directly. The utter vanishing of this fun is one of he most remarkable changes of the kind I can recall.—All the Year Round.

Edgar Field in October Californian.

An Incident of the Seven Days.

A battery of the First artillery halted that night in a little clearing. The men lay down, unhitched their horses, but leaving them in harness. The first sergeant, now an honored officer of the Third artillery, told me he got up and walked toward one side of the clearing. He was halted and turned back by a sentinel. Going toward the other side, he was again challenged:

"Who comes thar?"

The voice struck him. He replied, "Friend;" and said; "What regiment is that?"

The answer came, "Seventh Alabama."

"What regiment is that on the other side?"

"Fifth Georgia," replied the sentinel. "What battery is that?"

Here was a situation. The sergeant naturally didn't know the name of a battery in the rebel army. Hesitation would have been fatal. By a lucky inspiration he replied, "One of Stuart's batteries," knowing that Jeb Stuarts commanded their cavalry.

"Oh," said the other, "then you's a hoss battery?"

"Yes," said C——. "Good night."

He immediately awoke the captain, who rather angrily said, "What the duce is the matter now?"

"Excuse me, captain," said the sergeant, "but we're camped between a Georgian and an Alabama regiment."

It is needless to say the captain got up. Horses were hitched in quietly, and the battery withdrew from between the sleeping regiments, who never knew of the prize that was within their grasp.

The Vote on the Constitutional Amendments.

AUGUSTA, Oct. 8.—The official vote on the constitutional amendments voted upon at the Gubernatorial election will not be declared until the session of the Executive Council, October 18th. A semi-official summary taken from the clerk's returns gives on the amendment electing Governor by plurality 57,115 in favor, to 35,784 against. On the amendment relative to the change in terms of office, 60,917 in favor to 16,669 against.

GEN. HANCOCK AGAIN.

He Says He was Offered the Command of the Army of the Potomac.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Gen. Hancock, in conversation to-day, said:—"After the failure of one of the campaigns of the army of the Potomac, I was detained in Washington one month by Secretary Stanton with a view of placing me in command of the army of the Potomac, but I did not want it and would not accept it."

A reporter visited the General's aids to inquire in relation to the publication in the Chicago Tribune of a letter purporting to emanate from a member of Gen. Hancock's "military family." The aids are Capt. Wharton, Capt. Ward and Gen. Mitchell, who were with Hancock at the battle of Gettysburg. Gen. Mitchell was not at the headquarters, but Capt. Wharton and Capt. Ward expressed much indignation when attention was called to the matter, and said they did not believe any such letter had been written

[The letter referred to above appeared in the Chicago Tribune of yesterday, and purports to have been written by an army officer who for many years has been near the person and in the confidence of Gen. Hancock. It consists in substance of an assertion that Gen. Hancock's health has for some time been bad, that recently he narrowly escaped an attack of apoplexy, and that the strain of his official duties as President, if he should be elected, would prove fatal. The Tribune says it has the original letter, but suppresses the name of the writer for personal reasons.]

NATURALIZATION FRAUDS.

Democrats Taking Measures to Protect Them.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—At a meeting of the Tammany General Committee last night resolutions were adopted calling on natualized citizens to resist by all lawful means the seizure of their naturalization papers by John I. Davenport's chief supervisor of elections employes, and stating that Tammany Hall would sustain them, and resolved to send a petition to Judge Blatchford of the United States Circuit Court to keep open court on election day to facilitate the proper supervision of processes issued on that day. Similar action was taken by the Irving Hall party.

A Rubber Factory Burned.

STOUGHTON, Oct 8.—The two story wooden building belonging to the Mystic Rubber Co., used as a cooling room, was totally consumed by fire this morning. It is thought the fire originated from spontaneous combustion. Loss $10,000 to $20,000; insurance $8000. Forty-five hands were employed, some of whom were badly burned in escaping from the building. The managers state they will rebuild in a fortnight.

WASHINGTON.

A Signal Service Sergeant Sent to Prison

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The court martial which recently tried Sergeant Ossian Aldrich of the signal corps for fraudulently raising money on vouchers, found him guilty and sentenced him to be dishonorably discharged from service and to one year's confinement in the military prison. He is also found guilty of desertion and sentenced to one year's imprisonment. The findings are subject to the approval of the Adjutant General.

Nothing from Gen. Hancock Yet.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—In an interview with a reporter this morning, Gen. Grant said he had not yet received any communication from Hancock in reference to the recently published Fowler interview, and when asked if he expected such a communication he said it was not impossible he should hear from Gen. Hancock, but he did not expect to before leaving Chicago, Grant left for New York this afternoon.

The Patent Roofing Swindle.

OUR COMMERCE.

Closing Session of the Commercial Convention.

FREE TRADE IN SHIPS CONDEMNED.

Congress Asked to Give a Bounty to American Shipowners.

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—The National Commercial Convention was called to order at 10 o'clock. Discussion on the free ship resolution was resumed, each delegate being limited to ten minutes.

John H. Boynton, of the New York Maritime Association, argued in favor of the enactment of navigation laws which would afford all the protection needed. If such laws were passed by Congress there would be no need of subsidies. With such laws American ships would be built and would control the carrying trade of the world. Protection has increased the balance of trade against us $72,000,000, while legislation in the direction of removing such a tariff would give us an export trade that would add $144,000,000 to our wealth annually.

W. W. Bates, of the Buffalo Dry Dock Association, favored the passage of an act by Congress providing for duties to be paid by all vessels not built or owned in the United States when they shall apply for clearance, the assessment of such dues to be at a rate to be fixed by law.

Nathan Crowell, of the Boston Board of Trade, spoke in favor of allowing foreign built steamers to run under the American flag; otherwise the commerce of the country would be entirely lost. Hitherto he had been opposed to free ships, but having come to realize the present alarming state of our commercial marine he had changed his views.

John P. Wetherell, of Philadelphia, spoke earnestly in favor of subsidies and against town and State taxes on shipping. He was of the opinion that navigation laws could not advance or hinder the progress of American commerce to such an extent as has been claimed. It was his belief that the payment of about $3,200,000 as subsidies by the English Government during the last fiscal year had a great deal to do with the success of England in securing the carrying trade of the world. Sailing expenses vary fully $700 a month between English and American ships, the difference being in favor of England, and affording in this single item a profit to English capitalists. With all his anxiety for American shipping, he favored a repeal of home taxation on shipping capital rather than a subsidy from the general government. He did not believe American capital could find profit in foreign shipping, nor did he believe that agitation for national aid to this interest came from those at present engaged in this branch of trade.

J. P. Townsend of the New York Produce Exchange, favored asking the Government to pay a bounty of 10 per cent. on the cost of construction, or such a sum per ton as shall be equal thereto, to shipbuilders, on all vessels built by them in the United States, and that citizens of this country may be permitted to buy vessels of foreign construction to be used in foreign trade and place them under the American flag on payment of a duty of 10 per cent.

Henry Winsor, of Philadelphia, opposed free ships. He thought it would not be complimentary to American shipbuilders to allow foreign built ships to be engaged in foreign trade under the American flag.

William H. Webb, of the New York Chamber of Commerce, reviewed the existing situation and proposed as a remedy the removal of taxation on shipping, a bounty of five dollars per ton on American built ships engaged in foreign trade, subsidies to American ships engaged in the mail service, remittance of duties on materials entering into the construction of American vessels, naval contracts by Government to native shipbuilders, using navy yards merely as rendezvous for ships, and enactment of laws for the protection of American ships and shipping.

John A. Ordway, of the Boston Merchants' Association, favored subsidizing American ships for foreign trade.

H. K. Miller, of the New York American Exchange, favored free ships.

Seth Low, of A. A. Low & Bro., New York, said the real question was the substitution of steam for sail, and what we must do was to put steam vessels upon the ocean. The history of sailing ships had been already written. One of England's great advantages was her banking institutions which dotted the world while hardly a branch of an American bank could be found outside the limits of the United States. He paid a hearty compliment to John Roach, saying it was his father's opinion as well as his own that there was no man in this whole country to whom the shipbuilding and commercial class owed so much as to that man who, single handed and alone, was determined that he would have an American steamship line upon the ocean no matter what it cost him.

This statement called forth loud applause, and Frank H. Thayer proposed three cheers for Mr. Roach which were given. Mr. Low, continuing, said that when we had ten John Roaches in this country we would have an ocean commerce. The speaker stated that he was opposed to the purchase of ships abroad. The cheapness of money, navigation of ships, their original cost and their use were elements that entered into the shipping business. Cheapness of money was now doing much for us. We used to think seven per cent. was a low rate of interest, but we are more accustomed to talk now of three per cent. There were many discriminations against us in the navigation of our ships. We are compelled to carry a life saving apparatus costing double what the English carried. We certainly ought to compel English ships to come up to our laws, or if we were unnecessarily stringent we ought to relax and give our merchants the same privileges with them. A gentleman connected with a Philadelphia line had told him that their vessels were inspected by a board on every trip before leaving an English port, and even the slightest defect had to be repaired, and vessels were put to all possible delays and annoyances, and yet a White Star line steamer could leave New York with only one blade in her screw and no one in the United States could interfere. He was not in favor of a repeal of the navigation laws nor yet of the proposition to ask for a bounty of so much a ton. They had got to have the support of public sentiment before they could work effectively. He was in favor of the compromise substitute which proposed a tax of ten per cent on foreign built vessels. That was a difference of twenty per cent in favor of American built vessels, and the difference of cost, as Mr. Roach himself said, was only ten per cent. He believed the day for the revival of our ocean marine was nearer than was thought.

Several amendments were offered to the resolution, but all were voted down, and the resolution as reported by the committee was adopted, which is as follows:

Results have clearly and forcibly shown that under the present condition of affairs our shipping cannot prosper or even maintain itself in competition with the navigation of other maritime peoples, therefore we call upon the Government to aid the restoration of our commerce by granting a bounty of —— per ton for sail tonnage and —— per ton for steam tonnage for a period of —— blank years after the passage of this act; this to apply only to vessels engaged in the foreign trade and not exceeding fifteen years of age.

The members of the convention went on a trip down the harbor in the afternoon.

The delegates returned from the excursion down the harbor at 5 o'clock and the session was resumed at 8 o'clock.

The convention having expressed its decided opinion in opposition to free ships and against advising the repeal of the navigation laws, proceeded to the consideration of other matters.

A resolution offered by Washington Ryan of Portland, was adopted in the following form:

That as a foundation for all measures proposed relating to ocean commerce and general navigation interests of the country this convention petition Congress to establish a department of commerce to be presided over by a separate cabinet officer, and that Congress assume and exercise the powers granted by the constitution to regulate commerce through that department.

The resolution of J. Edward Burtt of Boston, in effect that Congress be petitioned to amend the law relating to admeasurement of vessels so that accommodations for officers and men shall be exempt from measurement or only such space as is available for cargo be measured and that the English laws for admeasurement of both steam and sailing vessels be adopted so that American vessels will be placed upon an equal footing with vessels of that nation, was amended by W. W. Bates of Chicago so as to provide for outside measurement and calling for the appointment of a committee of five to consider the subject and prepare a bill for presentation to Congress.

The amendment was voted down and the resolution as originally reported was adopted.

A resolution calling for the abolition of compulsory pilotage caused a lively discussion.

Henry Winsor of Philadelphia opposed the resolution. He said there was other compulsory pilotage besides that of compelling a captain to take a pilot. The law as now constituted make it compulsory on the pilot to board and pilot ships having contagious diseases on board. This he did not want changed. He thought the English pilot laws were good enough.

B. L. Osborne strongly favored its abolition. He argued that tug boats were pilots today and in support of his argument he stated that no sooner does a pilot get on board a vessel than he begins to look around for smoke. When sighted the ship is headed for it and as soon as the tug makes fast the pilot sits down and the captain of the tug takes the ship into port. He cited many cases of compulsory pilotage where half pilotage was charged when no service was performed.

James E. Ward of New York, spoke in favor of the resolution. He said he was managing a line of steamers plying between New York and Havana. He paid his captain who sailed his ship and run the risk of sickness, $200 per month, and to the pilot who spent but five hours on his ship more than he did his captain.

J. Edward Burtt of Boston stated that his firm were obliged to pay $600 on a single ship running to Savannah.

Mr. Ward said that every steamer run ashore, coming to New York, for the past two years had a pilot on board, and Mr. Elwell of New York said the same was true for the past twenty-five years.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 24 to 19.

Frank Thayer of Boston offered a resolution that in the judgment of the convention the office of United States Commissioner should be abolished and the ship owners and captains left free to employ officers and men to man their ships, and to pay them off without interference from any government official.

This resolution brought out Mr. Osborne of New York, who made an attack upon the shipping commissioner of New York, and Mr. Elwell defended him

Capt. Snow of New York also defended the commissioner of New York.

Mr. Thayer said it was not the man but the office of which he complained. He had nothing against Mr. Duncan, but it was well known that he got his position through Ward Beecher's influence.

The commissioner of Boston was a politician from Wiscasset and could never be found in his office.

Mr. Osborn rose again and said that he had said nothing but what nine-nine out of a hundred business men who had appeared before Congress had said.

The discussion was stopped by a point of order being raised that the convention was not trying the commissioner of New York and the resolution was adopted, 18 to 12.

On motion of A. K. Slayter of Manchester, N. H., the convention voted to appoint a committee of one from each organization represented to carry out the action of the convention.

On motion of Mr. Elwell of New York it was voted to recommend to the Senate and House of Representatives the passage of an act to set apart all custom house duties including tonnage tax collected from vessels of all nations including our own in all ports in the United States as a special fund which shall be appropriated exclusively to pay bounty to American ship owners, as recommended in the previous resolution.

On motion of W. H. Webb of New York voted to memorialize Congress to change the existing laws which make each individual owner responsible for all debts of a vessel, restricting his liability to his proportion of ownership.

After passing a vote of thanks to all who have in any way assisted in making the convention successful, and after remarks from several members the convention adjourned.

INDIANA.

Fears of Trouble on Election Day.

THE STATE OVFRRUN WITH DEMOCRATIC ROUGHS AND REPEATERS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Private despatches received here from Indiana are of an exciting character, and foreshadow possible bloodshed on election day. Roughs, repeaters and bullies of all sorts are arriving in large numbers from Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York, and detectives are constantly employed to keep watch of them. The intensity of feeling is said to be very much greater than it was four years ago, and the corruption fund is large. Yesterday William H. English, Democratic candidate for Vice President, supplied the Democratic treasury with an additional contribution of ten thousand dollars, and the Democrats are now said to have a surplus at Indianapolis of fifty thousand dollars. which is to be given to-morrow to the Democratic managers in the smaller country districts, especially in the Democratic strongholds, with a view of increasing as much as possible the the Democratic majorities there. English, in handing in his ten thousand dollars, is said to have stated "that there will be more if necessary." Eastern Democratic managers are not satisfied with English's contributions, and telegrams for additional sums to be transmitted by telegraph have been made upon parties in New York.

Meanwhile United States Marshal Dudley has employed a large corps of assistants to see to it that the federal laws are not violated and that fraudulent voters do not succeed in violating the ballot. Dudley, who is a one-legged soldier, is said to be the bravest citizen of Indiana, and the Democrats understand that he will do his duty. He proposes to lodge as many of the Eastern plug-uglies and Kentucky repeaters in the penitentiary as possible.

The Greenbackers still claim that they will poll a vote something like forty thousand. The Republicans do not admit that the Greenbackers will poll more than ten thousand. The Democrats are evidently making large bids for the Greenback vote, and are circulating stories there, on the authority of Barnum, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, that the leading Greenback organs in the country are recommending fusion in Indiana. This story was circulated yesterday with respect to the National View, the Greenback organ of this city, it being reported in Indiana that Barnum had purchased the controlling interest in it. This the owners and managers of the View here indignantly deny, and the View, in an editorial in its next issue, will denounce the report and urge the Greenbackers to stand by their ticket.

RELIGIOUS.

Triennial Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Both houses of the Protestant Episcopal General Convention held a joint session this morning as a Board of Missions, Bishop Smith of Kentucky presiding and making a brief address. Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter, Secretary of the House of Bishops, read the report of the board of managers of the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society. The total income for missions from 1874 to 1877 was $932,897, while from 1877 to September last it reached the sum of $943,838. The Domestic Commission since the last annual convention have fallen short in their returns of the standard attained in the triennium previous, $120,000. The Foreign, on the contrary, have advanced $48,000 beyond an earlier figure. The board thankfully acknowledge the efficiency of the Mexican League and the assistance of the Woman's Auxiliary. The latter of these agencies has contributed $105,524 in money, besides books, clothing and hospital stores, valued at $208,000.

The report further sets forth that the receipts of the domestic committee, for work among the Indians and Colorado people, from Sept. 1, 1879, to Sept. 1, 1880, were $65,273.08. Payments during the same period, $164,267.37. In 11 missionary jurisdictions and 25 dioceses receiving their entire or partial support from the domestic committee, there are 9 missionary bishops and 265 clergymen among the white people; among the Chinese, one Chinese clergyman; among the colored people, 13 white clergymen, 11 colored clergymen, 4 lay readers and 18 teachers; among the Indians, 1 missionary bishop, 12 white clergymen, 11 native clergymen, 3 teachers, 10 native catechists and 12 women helpers.

The receipts by the Foreign Committee from September 1, 1879, to September, 1880, were $462,184.25. Payments during the same period $391,670.56. The report states the Woman's Auxiliary renders efficient aid in the work of all departments of the board.

The Late Frank J. Lynde.

The funeral of the late Frank J. Lynde took place at the residence of Mr. E. F. Dillingham at Bangor, Thursday. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Field and consisted of the reading of appropriate passages from the scriptures and prayer. At the close musical selections were given by the choir, after which very many of the friends of the deceased took a last look of the face of one who had been beloved by all. W. S. Dennett, Esq. acted as master of ceremonies, and the following gentlemen were pall-bearers: Messrs. Isaiah Stetson, Herbert Fogg, Louis Schwartz, F. A. Strickland, F. H. Clergue and Geo. Nutter. The floral offerings completely surrounded the casket, and were very elaborate and beautiful.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

F. S. CHANFRAU IN "KIT."

There are actors whose work absolutely defies unfriendly criticism; and there are plays which, though not artistically arranged, are always pleasing and always interesting. Such an actor is F. S. Chanfrau; and such a play is "Kit, the Arkansas Traveller," which was produced at the New Portland Theatre, last evening.

There is little to be said regarding Mr. Chanfrau; his impersonation is a positive revelation; familiar, yet always new. The play is a backwoods idyl and the actor is its worthy interpretation. Mr. Chanfrau's support was excellent. Mr. Price as Manuel Bond, was vigorous, manly and energetic. Mr. Edwards gave the best impersonation of Mr. Stubbs we have ever seen. The Two Beats, in the persons of Messrs. D. J. Maguinness and Leslie Allen, were, of course, inimitable. Messrs. Chase and Parks were satisfactory. We should not omit to mention the Jerry Sleepers, of Mr. Skinner. He has the credit of exciting new interest in a minor character.

For the ladies, we have nothing but praise. Miss Lanner is one of the most charming and cultivated of the Boston Theatre graduates. Her acting as Mary and Alice Redding was never forced nor unnatural. She was especially happy in the thrilling scene with Bond; and the lines which other actresses might have spoiled by ranting and gesticulation, were rendered with intense force. Miss Noah was quite pleasing, though her part was hardly worthy her abilities. Mrs. Pennoyer made the most of a minor character.

The play will be repeated this evening.

MSIS BELGARDE AS HAMLET.

Miss Belgarde who appeared as Hamlet at Niblo's Theatre, New York, recently did not make a favorable impression. The Tribune, while admitting that she exhibited talent in acting, and that "Hamlet in her hands carried himself through as he has so often done before without a fiasco," felt obliged to say: "But Miss Belgarde's talent, whatever else it may compass, should not impel her in the direction of the melancholy Dane. Her qualifications for the character were seen to be a slender figure, a thin, weak, high, head voice, with a strong predisposition to nasal enunciation, a fidgety manner, a nimble, poinpjay temperament, a superficial understanding of the text, a considerable familiarity with the usual stage business, and an obvious ignorance of every emotion and every intellectual purpose that underlie the words. Her delivery of the great soliloquy on death, for instance, was that of a child "speaking a piece" at a school examination, and her feeling in the subsequent pathetic scene with Ophelia—one of the saddest and tenderest scenes that ever the imagination of man conceived—was very much that of the vinegar cruet when the stopper flies out at an unexpected moment. In the killing of Polonius her weakness became painfully obvious. In brief, this great tragedy was belittled in every way—the audience, which was quite numerous, applauding the convulsive gurglings, the wrong emphasis, and the lackadaisical demeanor of this Hamlet, at every possible point, and thus presenting a spectacle of ignorance even more humiliating than that which was displayed upon the stage."

NOTES

"My Partner" was given at Lewiston Thursday evening to a crowded house.

The tickets for the Spanish Students and their combination at City Hall, October 16, will be sold at Stockbridge's next Monday morning.

G. Walter Goold proposes to give a performance of his opera "Tickelick" soon for the benefit of the India street church.

Prof. W. P. Morgan will give a series of illustrated lectures at Congress Hall next Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

Abbey's Humpty Dumpty and Tyrolean Warbler Combination," will appear at the New Portland Theatre, next Friday and Saturday, Oct. 15 and 16.

Geo. M. Bosworth & Co.'s Opening.

George M. Bosworth & Co. made a formal opening yesterday of their new and elegant store in the new Hammond Block, 591 Congress street. The wall decorations are not all complete, but enough has been done to show that the firm will display all the new and attractive styles of paper and decorations. Mr. Bosworth has made his store advertise his business as will be seen at a glance on entering. The firm propose to take entire houses to decorate throughout, as well as to supply every article in their line that will be likely to be called for.

The Alleged Counterfeiters.

Card was brought before Commissioner Rand yesterday and waived examination. His bail was then fixed at $2500, which he was unable to furnish and was remanded to jail. Pride will be brought before Commissioner Rand this morning. Hon. M. P. Frank has been retained as counsel for Card, and C. E. Clifford, Esq. for Pride.

A GREENBACK CIRCUS.

HOW THEY DEPOSED MR. J. F. TURNER.

A Rich Addition to Parliamentary Law.

The Fusionists are of the opinion that if they haven't made any mistake in parliamentary law and if they understand the constitution correctly, Mr. J F. Turner is not a member of the Greenback City Committee, or that ward seven isn't connected with the Greenback City Committee, or that the committee isn't dependent on ward seven, or that ward seven Greenback committee is not the city committee, if the city committee exists at all, providing that the question of privilege doesn't take precedence of the previous question to the extent of making the city committee the committee of ward seven, or—but enough. The whole question is a mistake that the party will never, probably, be able to get straightened out.

Last evening the venerable John M. Todd found himself in the midst of his faithful followers, or late faithful followers, or followers who would have been faithful if he hadn't gone over to Fusion, and Mr. Todd, it was understood, had on his mind the removal of Mr. Turner from the city committee, but Mr. Todd had something else on his mind. He felt the importance of paying the rent on the headquarters and stated that some money was needed—which also suggests the fact that Cap'n Chase has shut down and isn't paying Greenback bills any more—and he proposed to take up a collection, and as he had, he admitted, made some money out of the election he offered to give twenty-five cents himself, and the offer was promptly accepted—and also the twenty-five cents.

Following this liberal contribution, Mr. G. W. Rice got up and read a communication signed by Mr. E. H. Armstrong, secretary of a Greenback meeting in ward seven, in relation to C. B. Mosely and J. F. Turner, members of the city committee from that ward, and relating that "for good and sufficient reasons these gentlemen had been expelled from the committee."

Mr. King moved to place the report on file, and then moved to take it from the table, which called up the venerable Todd who moved to ratify and confirm the action of the Greenbackers of ward seven.

Mr. Wilber appealed "in the name of justice" that Mr. Turner be given a trial, and wanted the meeting run in accordance "with law." He didn't believe that the party in ward seven could remove any one. Mr. King got on his feet, and kept there, and commenced a speech that continued more or less throughout the evening. He found a case in point that fully justied the action taken, in the expulsion of the rebel Senators in 1862. He said Mr. Turner. being a traitor, ought to be expelled.

After a long discussion between Messrs King, Wilber and others, Mr. R. M. Springer tried to speak, but Mr. King objected. He wanted to know if Mr. Springer wasn't a traitor himself.

Mr. Springer seemed to regard the question as personal and declined to reply. Mr. Springer made himself heard, at last, long enough to observe that he wanted to know "if a member of this committee is to be ousted by an outside mob?"

Mr. Todd, at this point, wanted to know if the previous meeting (Mr. Springer's "mob") had, when they met, any official knowledge of the charge against Mr. Turner?

Mr. Rice thought not; in fact, he felt as sure of it as under the circumstance he could be expected to of anything in this uncertain world.

Mr. Springer inquired if Mr. Chenery had not called Mr. Turner's name in the list of the committee.

Mr. Chenery said that he supposed he did.

Mr. Springer thought that when he got ready he should raise a point of order, that the entire proceeding was out of order.

Mr. King said that if the first meeting had been illegal that irregularity had been cured when the meeting voted that if it was not legal it should become so.

Mr. Wilber couldn't see how an illegal meeting could vote itself legal, but Mr. King explained that the committee wasn't run by any known law, or, if it was, that they could change the law at any time.

Mr. Springer offered to read extracts from Cushing's Manual, but the offer was respectfully declined.

A long and rambling discussion followed on points of parliamentary law, Mr. Todd acknowledging that he didn't know anything about parliamentary law, but that he would be "everlastingly Greenbacked" if he would serve on a committee with a man who would bolt a nomination. He said that Mr. Turner was not in sympathy with his party.

Mr. Springer said that the charge of bolting might be brought against him, and Mr. Todd in the most liberal spirit offered to move the expulsion of Mr. Springer. "If he wants to become a martyr" observed the venerable man "he can become one on my motion."

Mr. Houston, a member of the committee, said: "I expect that my time will come next, and I don't care how quick. I never voted for a Fusionist and never will. You can expel me as quick as you like, but I want you to understand I don't think much of this crowd."

Mr. Todd was understood to move Mr. Houston's expulsion, and Mr. Houston with the remark that he never would vote for a Democrat, seconded the motion, but Mr. Todd said he had been misunderstood.

A gentleman at this point said with great excitement that if Mr. Turner was expelled, twelve other members of the committee must be expelled also.

A lively wrangle over points of parliamentary law followed, Mr. Turner's friends demanding over and over again that he be given a hearing, but the committee seemed to be of Mr. King's opinion that Mr. Turner was sure to be convicted any way, and that it was no use to lose time in a debate. Finally, and after the whole matter had become mixed far beyond mere human comprehension, Mr. Rice cut short all debate, ruled Mr. Springer out of order, asked Mr. King to keep quiet a moment, and put the question of sustaining the action of the Ward 7 committee in removing Mr. Turner, and declared it carried 13 to 6, Mr. Springer and Mr. Turner declaring to the last that they yielded only to brute force.

The Canton Failure.

The creditors of Otis Hayford of Canton, who recently suspended, met in Canton Thursday. Quite a large number of the creditors were present, while others were represented by counsel. George D. Bisbee of Buckfield was elected chairman, and George C. Wing of Auburn, secretary of the meeting.

Mr. Hayford, through his counsel, A. A. Strout of Portland, presented full and carefully prepared schedules of his assets and liabilities. Mr. Hayford's net available assets, which, owing to the relations of the parties, include the assets of Dura Bradford, who also suspended at the same time, amount to $14,610.76. Mr. Hayford's direct liabilities, which for the same reason include the liabilities of Bradford, amount to $30,811.82. The last named sum does not include Mr. Hayford's contingent liabilities as indorsed upon other paper. But Mr. H assured his creditors that he had no apprehension of being called upon to pay any of the latter class.

After a full explanation, upon motion of M. P. Frank of Portland, who represented several of the Portland creditors, the following committee of the creditors was raised for the purpose of investigating the affairs of Mr. Hayford, viz.: George D. Bisbee, Buckfield; J. M. Robbins, Lewiston; George C. Wing, Auburn; Alfred Woodman, Portland; Granville Child, Canton; H. M. Bearce, Norway.

The committee were instructed to have the result of their examination printed and sent to every known creditor. The assignee, James L. Irish, was instructed to pay the expenses and reasonable charges of the committee for their services in behalf of the creditors. At a subsequent meeting of the committee, it was decided to have the examination on Monday next at Canton.

Y. M. C. A.

At a meeting of the official board of the Y. M. C. A. it was decided not to change for the present the character of the meetings, and therefore Mr. William Needham will not hold, as had been proposed, a series of special revival services here, in connection with the work of the association. The feeling was that the association as now conducted, has the hearty sympathy and cordial support of the pastors and people of the several churches to a greater degree than it would have were it to leave its own special field and commence a work that the churches can do as well if not better. The relations between the association and the churches was never more cordial and hearty than at the present time, and the association was never doing its own special work in a more satisfactory manner.

The Portland Provident Association.

There will be an attempt made to call out a larger attendance than usual at the annual meeting of the association this year. For several years past the attendance has been generally limited to the management for the previous year, although there are several hundred persons who, having paid their dollar, are members of the association. This year a postal card, giving the call, and the by-laws of the association in respect to membership, will be sent to every person whose name is on the books, and it is hoped that all who can do so will attend the annual meeting.

Discharged.

Andrew Olsen, accused of an assault on the high seas, was brought before Commissioner Clifford yesterday morning. He proved that the alleged assault consisted in striking a sailor who was in the act of drawing a knife on him, while in the discharge of his duty as mate of the ship Marcia Greenleaf, and that he used no more violence than was necessary under the circumstances. He was discharged.

RICHMOND LOCALS.

RICHMOND, Oct. 8.

Building in Richmond is taking a start this fall. The foundations for a new brick store are being laid on Main street. On Front street Whitney's new store is being rapidly pushed forward. C. M. Foster is erecting a house lower down the street. B. F. Craig has contracted to build a new store near the foot of White street, and Small & Dale have contracted to build a block, 60 x 38 feet, of four tenements for T. J. Southard on Front street, between White and Church streets. It is probable that more building will be done as rents are very scarce here.

Naples.

The "golden wedding" of Capt. James Chute and wife of Naples was celebrated at their family home in this town, Monday afternoon and evening. This ancient couple were married in Portland, Oct. 4th, 1830, by Rev. Charles Junkins; came directly to their home in Naples and have lived on the same place all of the time since. Their first buildings were burned about 1853, but they were quickly replaced by their present pleasant home. Their first child died in infancy, Edward P., the fifth one, died at home from disease contracted in his country's service. Watson, Catherine, Warren and Mary Ann live in Naples, Adelbert at Cumberland Mills, Andrew at Cape Elizabeth, and Charles in Lowell, Mass. All the children were present with their families, and other relatives and friends to the number of about 130, spent the afternoon and evening, partaking of a fine dinner, and in the evening an oyster supper. After dinner the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. B. Pease of this town, with appropriate remarks, after which D. H. Cole, Esq., made some remarks, followed by James Chute, 2d, in a historical account of the family, all of which was very interesting. Capt. Chute has been a strong temperance man ever since the early days of Shirley, Walton, Stackpole, Dow and others, has mingled with them in their meetings, has always been a strong Republican and is looking forward anxiously to vote for Garfield, our next President, in November next. To say that Capt. Chute and wife have the best wishes of all who know them is but to faintly express the feelings of kindness and respect entertained toward them. The presents were numerous and valuable and among them were a purse of $75 in gold, gold bowed spectacles for each and a very handsome bouquet from Dr. Bray of Portland.

TRANSIENT.

Benjamin Bailey.

Many of our older business men will be pained to learn of the death of the good old man whose name stands above. He died at Alfred on Sunday, the 26th ult., at the ripe age of 81 years. For about seventy years he has been a prominent and trusted member of "The United Society of Believers," as they call themselves—Shakers, as the world's people call them—and he has consistently exemplified his profession. There are probably few men better known personally to the country merchants and hotel keepers of York and Cumberland counties, and the whole eastern portion of our State than he was. For many years, or until his eyesight began to fail, he made regular winter journeys as far east as Calais and Eastport, and even across the border into the New Dominion, in selling the Shaker garden seeds which were formerly so much used.

He was a sterling character, firm as a rock in what he thought to be the truth and the right, yet tender and loving as a child. In fact, another of his prominent traits was love of children; for them he always entertained a deep and universal regard. We shall never cease to remember his sweet, tender affection for the young, yet expressed in such a noble, manly tone of voice. Only a month ago we enjoyed a visit at the Alfred community, and not the least pleasant thing about it was the interview with him and his brother, Merrill Bailey, himself now an old man of seventy odd years. His memory of events, persons and dates was indeed remarkable. He overflowed with incidents and anecdotes of men of prominence in this vicinity in other days, especially of such a brilliant and witty man as was John Holmes.

Some eighty years ago his father took up a tract of land in the wilds of Colebrook, Coos county, N. H., and very entertaining was the story of the hardships of his father and mother in that northern wilderness at that time. But after a time he became converted to the doctrines of Mother Ann Lee, then creating considerable interest in this country, and with his whole family he "gathered" to the Shakers, where he worthily lived and died. Benjamin and Merrill Bailey, with their most estimable sister, Eldress Jane Tarbox, lately deceased, were among the principal supporters of the Alfred community for half a century, and they each bore their burden like faithful Christians, as they were.

Hail and farewell then, dear old friend and honest man, we may not soon look upon thy like again, and some of the sweetest memories of life will ever cluster around thy sterling and beautiful character. R.

The "Reception" at Standish.

The reception given by Sheriff-elect Sawyer to his supporters, at Standish Corner Wednesday evening was not without its unpleasant features, as some of those who attended are now confessing. In the first place the walk from the station to the Corner, over a rough, uneven country road told on some, at least, of the Portland Fusionists, and when they arrived, tired and hungry, they were obliged to listen to speeches by F. M. Fogg and Elliot King before they were invited to eat and drink at the expense of Mr. Sawyer. The Fusionists made the mistake of lighting up too early, and in most cases the candles were all burned out before the procession arrived. The dance would have been more successful had the dancers been less tired, and what little strength they had left was pretty much all used up before they got back to the depot, where standing room was all that could be counted on for the return trip.

Kennebunk.

The Republicans of Kennebunk have organized a Garfield and Arthur club and paraded Wednesday evening for the first time. They have a showy uniform, consisting of blue Zouave cap with red tassel, white blouse trimmed with blue, red belts and white leggings.

Kennebunk Republicans have not been given to making much noise or show, always having a good majority without making any effort; but they feel keenly the disgrace of the September election, and now propose not only to take care of their own town, but have a majority to spare that shall wipe out the Democratic majority in all the towns that join them. If the Republicans in all the towns of the State will be as "attentive to duty" as the Republicans in this town Maine will give Garfield and Arthur 5000 majority.

A Splendid Display.

Allen & Co., 229 Middle street, display one of the best arranged windows to be found in any store in the city. The firm commenced arranging the goods in the window at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, and completed the work a half-past 12 this morning. About $1000 worth of furnishing goods are displayed in the window alone, and inside the stock is very large, the firm showing over 500 different styles of ties and scarfs, including all the different grades of the famous Fisk, Clark & Fling's "Claudent." Some magnificent specimens of the Obelisk-Joinville goods are in the window.

THE PRESS.

[For the Press.]

Chased by a Mountain.

—OR—

The Peculiar Experience of Mr. Flynn.

Nonsense, you say? What's nonsense, for Mr. Flynn or any other man to be chased by a mountain? How do you know? Wait till you hear about it. There's no harm in listening to the yarn, is there? And if I'm going to tell it, just you bear in mind, I shall tell it in my own way and time. To begin with, you'll want to know who this Flynn was, anyhow, that was chased. Well, I'll tell you that first. He was a tourist, a Summer tourist. He wasn't very tall, nor yet very short. He wore a linen duster and a whitish cloth hat, 'bout an inch thick, like a wash basin upset. Then he had side-whiskers, and carried an eyeglass over his little peaked stubby nose. His satchel was slung over his shoulder by a strap, and had a double-barreled telescope in it, and a pipe, a bottle—he thought he might go trout fishing, you see, and want some ointment—and other traps. His pockets were cram full of papers. Under his arm he had a cane and an umbrella, and in his right hand a valise. With his left hand he held onto a "Guide to the White Mountains." That's where he was going when I first caught sight of him at the depot buying his ticket for "Crawford's."

Oh, you can always tell 'em, these tourists. They look so kind of curious and green like. They don't seem to know a thing 'bout the country. Now there's Baldwin, where the farm is, and they had the shooting matches—he didn't know 'bout that, he didn't! I ain't nothing but a conductor, but I guess I know where Baldwin is.

How did I happen to know him? Well, it ain't according to my way of telling the story, but I'll explain that right here.

He come out into the baggage car at Baldwin and said as how he thought maybe I'd tell him where the points of interest were; and wanted to know if there was any water in that car, as he said he'd like to put some in his bottle—the ointment, you know. It appeared to me it took him some time to fix it when he found the water, and besides there was a whole cooler full in the next car.

Well, I showed him some of the places, and we got quite confidential like, only he seemed to be afeard his ointmen wan't right, and had to go and put water in it pretty often. He seemed to think a heap of the country, like as though he'd always lived in it. Said it was "rural" and "lovely," and that natur was very beautiful in Maine. "Why," said he, "some of the people have a very natural look—in fact look like naturals." He had a return ticket, you see, and wanted to stay over Sunday on it—asked me if it would make any difference except that I'd get a dollar! I told him I thought it would. When we got to North Conway he thought that was Mt. Washington! At Fryeburg he wanted to know all about the park, but when we changed to the open cars at Bartlett, and he got into a corner behind the glass, out of the way of the cinders, 'peared as tho' he'd go crazy. Said it was grand and wonderful. Well, so it is, so it is. Then I told him about the building of the road, and showed him the trellis work and the old Willey house way down in the valley, and Mt. Washington in the distance, and when we got to Crawford's he had concluded to go up Mt. Willard, and wanted me to come down the next morning (that was Sunday) and go up with him! I told him I would. You see I've never been up on top of that mountain, and I thought I'd like to knows what's the fun of going. But I couldn't get round to go with him, and he told me when we got to Crawford's that he should go anyhow. Says he "What time shall you come down on the Monday morning train conductor? Say I, "We'll leave Crawford's about six that morning." Says he "Well, I shall get up early, and see the sun rise from Mt. Willard and then come down on your train." Says I, "I shall be glad to see you, sir, but mind, everybody who goes up there in the morning wants a big coat I reckon, and a mouthful of spirit (if he can get it) to rub the cold out." Says he, "Conductor, I'll take 'em both" and seemed to me he looked kind of tender like at his satchell. Then I went about my business, and didn't think no more of him till the next Monday. We got down to Crawford's a bit ahead of time that morning. You know how sort of quiet and cool and still Crawford's is early in the morning; the air don't seem to have waked up quite, the smoke goes straight up from the engine in a white column. The sides of the mountain covered with the pines have small rolls of white mist on 'em, just as if they'd been left by some big white cloud who'd spent the night there. Then the pond below what they call Idlewild, is all still like a looking grass, and up in the air you can see the yellow streaks of sunlight shooting up from t'other side the notch. Down through the notch it seems as tho' everything was covered in fog, and the band ain't playing, and the hotel is all quiet. Well, as I was saying, we were a little ahead of time, but there on the station was this Flynn (a driver from the hotel told me his name, that's how I know it.) He looked just as afore only he had on a slouch black hat and a big ulster. He come right aboard, and says he,—"How are yer conductor! Splen-morn!" Says I "Fine sir, fine." "Ben up old Willard, co'ductor." "Have yer?" says I "what d'yer see sir:" "Well," says he, "I'll tell yer all about it. Got up middle th' night, got in wagon—splen' wagon, good horses too—two of 'um. Got n'ulster you see! Splen' road! Winds all round like a corkscrew 'zactly. Through trees, lots of 'em. Got up 'n 'bout 'n hour. Got out wagon. Looked all round. Splend' view, conductor, Splen'id. Willard's is all stone and brush. Side ahead of you goes-down—well, s'pose ten thousand feet, right down, straight to valley—off on right's big gorge 'tween Willard and 'nother one. Mist comes down through that 'bout ninety miles 'n hour, lots of it—big sea of it, still's a church, comes down through there rushin'—no sound, though—comes like a ghost, goes like one. On left Notten Gorge—down toward Notch. Mist comes through there too. Splendid. Acres of it,—all still—rolls through; ma'nificent; 'stonishing! Down in front is valley. Some our trains came up through. 'Bout ten thousand feet down 'parently, mists from the two gorges meet and roll on through that. Sometimes breaking away. See Willey house 'way down. East side of this is big gorge, is big mountain—covered 'n mist. By 'm by long shaft gold came a-shooting through the mist over mountains, came a shootin an a-dartin rapid's lightening—Beau'ful! Then, overhead, co'ductor, mist turned all colors red, green, blue, gold, everything—then light came farther, grew brighter, and finally whole sun, co'ductor, whole sun shot up over eastern mountain, turned mist to fleece o' gold, and streamed away down the valley till it reached the blue mountain beyond. Thats what 'saw conductor; splen'id, splen'id! Never forget Willard, never. Have cigar?"

I declined; 'cause don't smoke on duty. Pretty soon the train left, and I went to get tickets. We'd got some way down the notch near the trellis work, when I got through and out to rear of last car. This Flynn was out there. Wind was fresh, and I thought I'd go and see if he was all right. Soon as I'd closed the door this Flynn grabbed me by the arm, and says he, "Conductor! See there! Look! See?" Says I, "What is it, sir?" Says he, "Don't see it? Look there! Something's wrong! That Mount Willard's loose! See her come? He's chasing us. He's chasing me. Look!" I looked at Mt. Willard, and, sure enough, it did look as though it was after us. Seemed as though it was a-moving right down, following in our track. I didn't remember ever to have seen that before, and what with the excitement of this Flyn I was quite stirred like. We were rushing down grade pretty fast and the trees on the left side were a-flying backward from us like mad, but that big mountain seemed to be gaining on us. I'd heard tell of avalanches, and I thought perhaps this was one, and there it don't take much to make a man shiver when it's cold. But this Flynn was a-going on great. Says he,—"Legends! I've heard 'em 'bout the enchanted mountain. That's it. Charm's up. Willard's free, broke loose. He's coming sure. Look! he's gaining on us! See him come? Hooray! racing with a mountain! Hooray, conductor, ole boy! S'pose he'll catch us? You're gone for, conductor! Gone up! Buried by a mountain! Hooray!" Then I started, and was going to see why we didn't go faster. Somebody met and stopped me as I went down the forward car, and when I got away the train was at the station, after rounding the long curve below the notch. Of course I knew 'twas all right then, soon as I'd had time to think a moment. Then I went back to this Flynn, and—blow me!—if he wasn't asleep out there on the platform! I shook him up and into a seat as soon as I could, and when we left North Conway he'd disappeared—got off there, I s'pose. But blow me if I shouldn't like to know wha he really thought about that mountain. Don't see how he came to make me feel so skeery-like for a minute. No; I know now it wasn't an avalanche, and I don't see why he thought it was. But what makes Willard 'pear to chase every train down that grade I don't know.

The Caledonia, Capt. Potter, will leave for New Orleans next Monday. She is ice and hay laden.

Twenty-four vessels arrived yesterday.

Four weddings next week.

The Garfield boys go to Boston on the 15th.

Mayor Hyde has gone to England to attend the wedding of his sister.

Mr. J. B. Hamilton of Lewiston will preach at the Beacon street church on Sunday.

A large amount of wood is being shipped to this city on account of the high price of coal.

Republican torchlight Tuesday.

Ira Mason and a man named Buker while loading the Caledonia this morning were injured, one being thrown down the hatchway and spraining his ankle, the other by being severely cut with a hay hook.

J. B. Drake is making extensive alterations in his grounds on Washington street.

Miss Louisa Plummer of this city sings at the Knox and Lincoln convention this evening in Rockland.

Decorating with fern is all the rage.

Outsiders say that Capt. Langdon has spent all of $5000 in alterations of his fine place on High street.

A young son of Mr. John Jackson broke his arm by falling while at play this morning. Set by Dr. Price.

The sequel to the robin story recently told in the locals is that in the following year when the C. C. Duncan was built at Woolwich, either the same robins or their children robins came and built their nest in a similar position on the stern of the vessel. The workmen reverently let them alone. They built their home, laid three eggs and raised three young and departed for the south, while the workmen were hammering on the ship. This vessel also, as the workmen believe, owing to this good omen had good voyages and success. Any more robin stories, gents?

Look out for the rattling Independent, Saturday.

Work on the telegraph office at the station is being pursued.

Quite a number of Bath young folks' excursioned to Rockland on the special train this afternoon.

An interesting bit of business news is reserved.

Goss & Sawyer's new schooner is being masted.

Bishop Healey will conduct the service at St. Mary's church Sunday.

Rev. S. L. B. Chase is in town.

BITTER

TONIC.

MALARIA. This happy combination from nature's storehouse, acting specifically upon the Liver and Stomach, removes from the system the poisonous principles which paralyzes its action and quickly throttles this hydra-headed monster, in whose wake follow the fevers that belong to the great and dreadful malarial family, which have their origin in Liver and Stomach derangements.

BITTER MALT-TONIC is unrivalled as a fever antidote, as well as a preventative against malaria attacks. It does the work by correcting the operations of the Liver and Stomach, from whence these troubles spring, and the whole fever brood of lurking, life draining maladies which so readily insinuate themselves into the system, are prevented and kept away by it. The potent influence of BITTER MALT-TONIC manifests itself stimulating secretion and excretion thus fortifying the system against the disease arising from a torpid state of the Liver.

French Politeness. Mlle. X. waits one morning in vain for the arrival of her old music teacher. At last his little daughter makes her appearance in his stead, and says: "Mamma sends me to say she hopes you will excuse papa from coming to give his lesson this morning because he is dead."

The Action is Sure and Safe.

The celebrated remedy Kidney-Wort can now be obtained in the usual dry vegetable form, or in liquid form. It is put in the latter way for the special convenience of those who cannot readily prepare it. It will be found very concentrated and will act with equal efficiency in either case. Be sure and read the NEW advertisement for particulars.—South and West.

At breakfast a remarkably light omelette souffle is served at a moment when every one is engaged in a deeply interesting conversation. The omelette is neglected and begins to settle down from its appetizing airiness, to the enormous disgust of the little daughter of the house, who exclaims, "O ma, do hurry! The omelette is eating itself."

"There may be some virtue in all of them," he said, "but for actual worth and rapidity of effect, I know that nothing made can excel Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup."

When a woman has worked for two hours to sweep a room and then, having collected the dirt and lint and little scraps of paper into the dustpan, goes to the window, opens it and throws the dirt from the pan just as a lively little gust of wind comes along and throws it all over the room again, does she get mad? Well, rather.—Boston Post.

The aged and infirm are strengthened and faculties brightened by Malt Bitters.

An old monkey, designing to teach his sons the advantage of unity, brought them a number of sticks and desired them to see how easily they might be broken one at a time. So each young monkey took a stick and broke it. "Now," said the father, "I'll teach you a lesson." And he began to gather up the sticks into a bundle. But the young monkeys, thinking he was about to beat them, set upon him altogether and disabled him. "There," said the aged sufferer, "behold the advantage of unity! If you had assailed me one at a time, I would have killed every mother's son of you!"

KIDNEY-WORT

The Only Remedy

THAT ACTS AT THE SAME TIME ON THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS.

This combined action gives it wonderful power to cure all diseases.

Why Are We Sick?

Because we allow these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors are therefore forced into the blood that should be expelled naturally.

KIDNEY-WORT WILL CURE

BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, URINARY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESSES, AND NERVOUS DISORDERS, by causing free action of these organs and restoring their power to throw off disease.

Why Suffer Bilious pains and aches?
Why tormented with Piles, Constipation?
Why frightened over disordered Kidneys?
Why endure nervous or sick headaches?
Why have sleepless nights?

Use KIDNEY-WORT and rejoice in health. It is a dry, vegetable compound and One package will make six quarts of Medicine. Get it of your Druggist, he will order it for you. Price, $1.00.
